The Society of United Irishmen was formed in 1701. Its objects were good, and it was proposed to attain them by Constitutional means. The objects were a fair in Parliament, and to PREVENT POREIGNERS FROM RULING IRRLAND. The Society had a complete organization, a test onth, a con-atitution, and modes by which the ment-bers were enabled to know one another.—

EGS thave to inform his old customers and body else that he has just received direct the publishers, a heavy invoice of Standard and cellaneous Works, Gift Books, Annuals, &c., a The Society was composed at first of persons of different religions-Episcopalians, Presbyterians, and Catholics. belonged to the Society, and took the test Taxation -- What Can the Legislature De. The people appear to be looking to the oming Legislature to change the present mode of taxation. This cannot be done .--The Supreme Court has decided that the tax law which allowed individuals to deduct their debts from their credits is unconstitutional, and the Constitution must be amended before a different mode from the present can be adopted; or this decision must be reversed by the Supreme Court. -We do not believe the supreme Court was justifiable in making the decision it did make, but being made we have not much hope that the same tribunal would reverse it; and hence we see no probable way to get the reforms desired in the mode of lavy ing taxes, only to amend the Constitution. To amend the Constitution will postpone all reforms in the mode of listing property for taxation for two years at least, for no amendment of the Constitution can be voted on by the speople till the next election for members of the Legislature. (See Constitution, Art. XVI, Sec. 1.) The course pursued by the Democrats is all the more reprehensible in view of these facts. The decision which has been of so much complaint was made by a Democratig Court, while a Democratic Legislature was in session, and the people then petitioned the Legislature for relief, but the

The shortest road to a change of the mode of taxation is to amend the Constitution, (unless the Supreme Court should reverse its decision, and of this, as before said, we have no hopes,) and that cannot be done so that the mode of levying can be changed before the spring assessment of 1857. It will devolve upon the present Legislature to propose an amendment of amendment be adopted then it will be the rite undersigned has opened in the White Baildbusiness of the next Legislature to amend Bank, a well associated Stock of Branks and Aredis the tax law .- Marysville Tribune.
